ENDORSE U. OF VIRGINIA FUND

GOV. DAVIS, SENATOR GLASS AND PRESIDENT URGE SUPPORT.

ISSUE STATEMENTS

Appeal Made On Basis Of State Pride and Obligation To Give.

Governor Westmoreland Davis, U. S. Senator Carter Glass and Dr. Edwin A. Alderman, president of the University of Virginia, this week joined in a message to the people of the State urging support for the University of Virginia's $3,000,000 Centennial Endowment Fund.

The nation-wide canvass of alumni and friends of education to raise this sum as a birthday gift for the famous old institution at Charlottesville is now under way. Executive Director Armistead M. Dobie announced that several hundred thousand dollars have been received to date.

The Governor's message stressed State pride in the University, which, for a century, has graduated men into the service of the Commonwealth. Senator Glass, Centennial Treasurer and former Secretary of the U. S. Treasury, expressed his confidence in the ability of Virginians to give. President Alderman said that the University, as one of the strongest factors in the State's educational system, claimed every citizen's support.

"The men and women of Virginia take a just pride in the achievement of her eminent sons," said Governor Davis, "and hold in high esteem the University of Virginia as a source from which many of her distinguished citizens have derived their training for life service. A financial crisis now endangers the future of our great University and its progress is impossible without further endowment aid, the effort to secure which has my unqualified approval and support.

"I am confident that the citizens of the State of Virginia will subscribe liberally to the University of Virginia's Centennial Endowment Fund."

Senator Glass' optimism for the national financial outlook is reflected in his statement that Virginians can afford to give to the University of Virginia. He said:

"I am confident that the ability of this nation and of this State to produce commodities that meet every need will insure prosperity for both. The prosperity of a nation or a State is often judged by the willingness of each to aid great educational and philanthropic enterprises.

"Speaking as a citizen, and not as treasurer of the Centennial Endowment Fund, I believe that the people of Virginia are both able and obligated to contribute to their own University."

President Alderman said: "The University of Virginia bears the same relation to the educational system of Virginia that a strong fort bears to its component units in a line of fortifications. If one breaks down, the whole system or line is endangered. The University is putting up a vigorous battle against the encroachments of an era of high costs. To maintain the State's educational standards, its citizens must give financial assistance to the State university."

On Peruvian Railways.

The railways of central Peru spread out in a Y, at the right-hand end of which is Huancayo, something more than 200 miles from Lima. At every railroad station, old women crowd through the cars selling the favorite nectar of the Incas, all purchasers drinking from the same cup, and generally several from the same filling. Nearly every traveler has his own supply of a more potent native beverage.

Ancient Dentistry.

Interesting specimen of Etruscan dentistry is now in the civic museum at Corneto of the Necropolis of Tarquinii and consists of three teeth, or, more properly, four abutment attachments and three supplies, the attachments being gold rings and the teeth supplied being the central incisors and bicuspids. The two central incisors are made from a single ox tooth grooved down to give it the appearance of two upper central incisors.

Bap of Earth Covers Two Acres.

At "Boy Land," a school for boys in Santa Barbara, Cal., it is possible to view the whole earth, laid out flat like a map over about two acres of ground. Rivers, lakes, mountains, valleys, continents, and oceans are all complete. The boys can paddle through the larger waterways.

Vain Warnings.

An eminent actor-manager tells a story concerning a clergyman and his actor son. Prior to his going on the stage the father wrote to the manager, saying, "My son, John, has threatened to go on the stage, and I want you to stop him." However, shortly afterward, the son did go on the stage, and the manager, meeting him one day, asked how his father took it. "I have not seen him," was the reply, "but he takes some interest in me, because whenever any actor is charged with a crime he underlines the report of it in the newspapers and sends it to me."

"Crooked Usage."

This curious name for a London street possibly arose from the fact that the word "usage" in former times was applied to the strips of common land, or paths, between private plots of cultivated land. London's "Crooked Usage" street was probably one of these paths.

Evolution of the Harp.

The modern harp has been evolved from types found among the Egyptians, Assyrians, Hebrews and various Celtic nations. No doubt the harp originated in the archery of olden times, and the twang of the released bow string.

Colds & Headache

"For years we have used Black-Draught in our family, and I have never found any medicine that could take its place," writes Mr. H. A. Stacy, of Bradyville, Tenn. Mr. Stacy, who is a Rutherford County farmer, recommends Black-Draught as a medicine that should be kept in every household for use in the prompt treatment of many little ills to prevent them from developing into serious troubles.

THEDFORD'S BLACK-DRAUGHT

"It touches the liver and does the work," Mr. Stacy declared. "It is one of the best medicines I ever saw for a cold and headache. I don't know what we would do in our family if it wasn't for Black-Draught." It has saved us many dollars . . . I don't see how any family can hardly go without it. I know it is a reliable and splendid medicine to keep in the house. I recommend Black-Draught highly and am never without it."

Lumber is Down

Yes, Lumber Is Down—Down to where a farmer can afford to build anything that can be made of lumber even in the face of a low market on farm products.

Lumber Was The Last Great Commodity To Go Up and the first to come down. Today lumber prices are down to where it is hard to see how they can go any lower when costs are considered.

You Farmers Have Reason To Be Disappointed In the returns from last year's crops, but with lumber selling on the present basis we don't believe you can afford not to do whatever building or repairing may be necessary before Spring work commences.

Whether It's a Barn, or a Shed, or Just Some boards for fixing up around the place, the facts about lumber will appeal to any man or woman who believes in thrift and knows values.
